German Companies Involved in the Israeli Settlement Enterprise
Bomag	Hellerwald D-56154 Boppard Germany	Bomag is a private-owned manufacturer of compaction equipment, headquartered in Boppard, Germany. It is part of the Fayat Group, a French conglomerate. Bomag equipment was used to pave roads leading to settlements in the West Bank, including Israeli-only roads, and roads at West Bank checkpoints, including the Jaba and Huwara checkpoints. Bomag rollers have also been used in the construction of the Tel Aviv-Jerusalem fast train line (A1), near the West Bank settlement of Mevo Horon. The new train's route crosses into the occupied Palestinian territory in two areas. Because of its illegal route, Deutsche Bahn (German Railways), which was advising Israel Railways on the line's construction, withdrew from the project.
H+E Logistik	Josef-Baumann-Strasse 18 D-44805 Bochum Germany	H+E Logistik is a private Germany firm that specializes in the planning, construction, supply and assembly of tunnel belt and conveyor systems. The company provided a conveyor belt system for transporting excavated material during the construction of Tunnel No. 3 of the new Tel Aviv-Jerusalem fast train line (A1). The new train route crosses into the occupied Palestinian territory in two areas (see above).
Heidelberg Cement	Berliner Strasse 6 69120 Heidelberg Germany	Heidelberg Cement, a publicly-traded German company, is the world's largest producer of cement and aggregate composites. In 2007, the company bought Hanson UK and became the owner of three plants in West Bank settlements and one Israeli aggregates quarry in the occupied West Bank through Hanson Israel. The quarry exploits the occupied Palestinian natural resources for the Israeli construction industry.
Herrenknecht	Schlehenweg 2 77963 Schwanau Germany	Herrenknecht is a private German manufacturer of mechanized tunneling equipment. The company supplied 3 tunnel boring machines (TBMs) for the excavation of Tunnels Nos. 1 and 3 of the Tel Aviv-Jerusalem fast train (A1), which crosses into the occupied Palestinian territory in two areas. Tunnel No. 3 lies partly within the OPT. Because TBMs are custom-made for each tunnel project, Herrenknecht would be well-aware that the tunnel boring would span into the OPT. Further, Herrenknecht representative are on-site to oversee the TBMs' operation.

French Companies Involved in the Israeli Settlement Enterprise
Alstom	3 avenue André Malraux 92300 Levallois-Perret France	Alstom is a publicly-traded French-based multinational corporation in the power generation and transport markets. The company is involved with the Jerusalem Light Rail, which was designed to connect Israeli settlements in East Jerusalem with West Jerusalem. Alstom manufactured the system's trains. It formerly owned 80% of EPC, the Light Rail's engineering, procurement and construction contractor, and fully owned Citadis Israel, its maintenance contractor. In 2013, Alstom sold its 20% stake in Citypass, the consortium that built and operates the Light Rail, but it retains shares in EPC and Citadis Israel.
Egis Rail	25 Cours Emile Zola 69100 Villeurbanne France	Egis Rail is a French transport infrastructure engineering company. It is part of the Egis Group, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Caisse des Dépôts. The company won a €11.9-million contract with Jerusalem Transportation Master Plan to assist in the construction and expansion of the light rail project in Jerusalem. The Jerusalem light rail is designed to connect Israeli settlements in East Jerusalem to West Jerusalem.
Veolia Environnement	36-38 avenue Kléber 75116 Paris France	Veolia Environnement is a multinational French provider of water, waste management, energy and transport services. It fully controls its subsidiary, Veolia Environnement Services Israel. Veolia Environnement owns and operates the Tovlan Landfill in the occupied Jordan Valley. The waste transferred to the landfill originates from recycling factories within Israel and Israeli settlements in the West Bank. The company uses captured Palestinian land and natural resources for the needs of Israeli settlements from both side of the green line. Another subsidiary, Veolia Water Services Israel, operates the Ayalon sewage treatment plant, which collects sewage from the settlement of Modi'in Illit.
Veolia Transdev	32 boulevard Galliéni CS 50002 92442 Issy-Les-Moulineaux Cedex France	Veolia Transdev is a French transportation services provider owned in equal shares by Veolia Environnement and Caisse des Dépôts et Consignations (CDC), a French state-owned financial institution. Through its subsidiary, Connex Israel, Veolia Transdev operated bus services through the occupied West Bank, serving settlements in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem. The company stopped operating the Modi'in bus network (which services West Bank settlements near Modi'in) in July 2013, and sold Connex Israel to the Israeli company Afikim in September 2013.
